E6. Please report all leases outstanding to client businesses in Canada as of December 31, 2005 by type of lease.

Table E6 has been modified. Responses are no longer required in the shaded cells. They have been left in the table for respondents who have systems that complete the form electronically, however the columns will be removed next year.

A capital lease is used to finance equipment for the major part of its useful life (more than 75%) and there is a reasonable assurance (through a purchase option or a transfer of ownership) that the lessee will obtain ownership of the equipment by the end of the lease term. An operating lease usually finances equipment for less than its useful life and at the end of the lease term the ownership of the equipment remains with the lessor and the lessee can return the equipment to the lessor without further obligation.

Knowledge-Based Industries (KBIs)

Introduction

Knowledge based firms are considered backbone of the "new economy." They have been considered to be consistently outperforming the total economy in terms of growth and job creation since the 1970s. Because of their smaller size and the nature of their activities, they imply different challenges for traditional suppliers of finance. Typically, firms involved in pharmaceuticals, health biotech, new materials, telecommunications, information technology, software, medical equipment and avionics are considered to be in the knowledge-based industries. They have long product development cycles and their comparative advantage usually comes from innovative and creative people who make up the development team. These companies face particular financing challenges because of their lack of fixed assets, the difficulty that traditional lenders have in assessing their potential, and the unique operational risks they face. As a result of challenges faced by these firms in obtaining financing, we have been asked to undertake collection of data related to the knowledge based industries to see the extent of financing activities related to firms in these industries.

Definition for KBI

In 1996, based on research undertaken by Industry Canada and the Business Development Bank of Canada, a definition of knowledge-based industries (KBI) was developed using the Standard Industrial Classification (SIC). This has since been converted to the North American Industrial Classification System (NAICS). Since there was no single definition of KBI, Industry Canada proposed the use of a two-tiered categorization of industries that would be appropriate for identifying industries as KBI.

- * Tier I a narrow band of science and technology-based firms, composed of knowledge producers; and
- * Tier II a broad band of "high knowledge" firms which, based on measures of research and development and knowledge worker inputs, could be considered to be business innovators and high-knowledge users.

The Tier I group consists of technology firms involved in the following industries; these are some examples of the industries in this group.

Aerospace Products and Parts
Audio and Video Equipment
Cable and Other Program Distribution
Computer and Peripheral Equipment
Computer Systems Design and Related Services
